

Synopsis

Tuna export is highly profitable luxury business in the world. It is an increasing demand for sea food in the world and Sri Lanka also successfully perform in this industry. Ceylon Catch (Pvt) Ltd is a 100% export oriented company which is engaged in the processing of frozen tuna products for export. Fifteen weeks of in-plant training was productively carried out in the processing field of Ceylon Catch (Pvt) Ltd.

The training program was concentrated mainly on processing operations and quality management practices of Ceylon Catch (Pvt) Ltd. Those expectations could be achieved through active involvements of the process in the establishment with advice and guidance provided by the responsible people in the relevant sections.

At the same time, SWOT analysis was done with the help of gathered information during the training period.